On March 14, 2023, the BMS department of Chandrabhan Sharma College organized a one-day educational visit to the Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE). The aim of the visit was to provide students with practical knowledge of the stock market and its functioning. The visit started at 10:00 am with a presentation on the history and functioning of the BSE by one of the senior officials. The presentation covered the various trading mechanisms, index calculation, and the role of the BSE in the Indian economy. The students were then given a guided tour of the trading floor where they observed the trading activities of the various brokers and traders. The expert lecture was conducted explaining the various investment strategies, risk management techniques, and the factors that affect the stock market.

The students also had the opportunity to interact with some of the traders and brokers, who shared their experiences and insights into the stock market. After the tour, the students were taken to the BSE library, where they were given access to a vast collection of books and research papers on the stock market. The students were also shown the BSE's online trading platform and were given a demonstration of how to use it.

ABSTRACT

This research paper relies on why there's a scarcity of confidence in students to begin up a business, then rather doing employment where there's no assurance of your future unless you're being very valuable to company growth. Many startups in India have been listed as top companies by Forbes but it's not an organization that has been happening for years, this startup has been in for the last 5 years and that is the amount every entrepreneur wants to attain. But why are there college students who don't wanna achieve something that's gonna change their life? There are reasons to hide it, many students in India still do not know how they'd start a business and if either started a business then how would they get an investment?

Several studies are exploring the importance of entrepreneurial skills while starting an enterprise. Students who had taken one or more entrepreneurship courses showed significantly higher levels of entrepreneurial self-efficacy on a variety of measures. Students in certain engineering disciplines like electrical and engineering science were found to participate in entrepreneurship education at higher rates than others.

Leading schools today also lack to show students about business creation and this thing neither involves students' minds unless it comes from their background. Entrepreneurship allows students to find out quite just their chosen field of study and creates an interdisciplinary environment to figure out and develop. The networks and friendships which develop help students to become better connected once they leave university, and help prepare them for long-run success.

Today, I would like to share a number of my research about the 'student entrepreneur' with you, with the hope that we can better understand this fascinating subset of entrepreneurs, their needs, and their goals.

Keywords: Entrepreneurship, Unemployment, Career, Business Creation.

INTRODUCTION

1. Understanding student entrepreneurs and reports on Indian startups.

~ Student entrepreneurs are geniuses, whether they are trying to be an engineer, or doctors, or performing as an actor, hosts, or comedians. Entrepreneurship has long been related to innovation, a definition popularized by the work of Schumpeter in the 1930s.

Many academics have missed out on student entrepreneurs within the debate regarding 'what makes an entrepreneur?' describing them as individuals who exploit academic research for gain. I'm sure that several student entrepreneurs will trust me once I say that this simply isn't true. My very own research points to quite the opposite; student entrepreneurs are creative individuals with a passion for helping others within their communities, and their start-up businesses do everything from web design, to serving tea and occasionally, to the event of pioneering medical machinery. There are thousands of start-ups being born each year in India. India is growing rapidly in startups and making billionaires and by creating 58 new billionaires in 2022 India is now the 3rd largest billionaire-producing nation and also increasing the number of startups by 10% in 2018 there were 50,000 startups in India and in 2021 there were 61,400 startups as of 10th January 2022. It is also shown that Indians are more into tech startups which also implies that there are 2-3 tech startups born daily. But with a superpower comes great responsibilities, there are many consequences after you start a business but don't know the way to handle one by yourself. With a lack of communication, and responsibilities and without guidance you can climb a tree with a booster but fall on the ground at the speed of a meteor. In India 50% of startups failed in 2019, and the failure rate of startups was around 90%. There is also research on the failure of 21.5% of startups in the first year, 30% within the second year and it goes on within 50% and 70% in the 5th year and 10th year. Nevertheless, there are still many great startups that are withstanding their thanks for moving out to their full potential by getting them as successful business creators.

LITERATURE REVIEW

Debjani Ghosh, president of Nasscom, said that the performance of Indian startups has demonstrated the strength and commitment being put by multiple startups across segments. The expansion of India's digital economy has also grown immensely and is fixing itself as a big contributor to the ecosystem. She added that with record-breaking funding, an increase in the number of unicorns, and jobs being created within the near term, the Indian startup ecosystem's future looks even brighter going ahead in 2022.

"The indisputable fact that Indian startups are digitally native is often a wonderful model for digital-native enterprises throughout the earth. I feel that the Indian startup ecosystem is solely getting started.

Pari Natarajan stated, that they were super excited about the potential of the startup's ecosystem from day zero over the following decade, upwards, and onwards.

As per the report, factors like building for 'Bharat', investments, talent availability, and ecosystem support are driving entrepreneurs to use emerging hubs to create businesses.

India accounting for 70 unicorns (companies with over USD 1 billion valuations) added a record number of latest unicorns (42) in 2021 across 18 sectors, third-highest after the US and China, standing around USD 90billion newly added unicorns with an accretive valuation.

A Better Understanding of Student Entrepreneurs

Many academics have skipped over student entrepreneurs within the debate regarding 'what makes an entrepreneur?' describing them as individuals who exploit academic research for gain and their start-up businesses do everything from web design, to serving tea and law, to the event of pioneering medical machinery.

Not Everything is About Money

Let's start from the get-go. Student entrepreneurs are not into money. Sure, there are plenty who would be keen to determine some gain at the top of running their businesses, but this isn't their goal. The following generation of entrepreneurs is, instead, driven by the potential to try and do things better, to make value for society, and to assist people in need.

Creativity is Vital

The first answer is simple: student entrepreneurs are creative individuals, no matter whether they're training to be an engineer or are performing as a humorist. Entrepreneurship has long been related to innovation, a definition popularized by the work of Schumpeter in the 1930s. Nevertheless, student entrepreneurs are always keen to indicate that you simply shouldn't do anything 'new' to be an entrepreneur. Indeed, student entrepreneurs are often inquisitive about doing things differently, whether that be by making incremental improvements to existing products and services, or applying another business model and way of thinking to a matter.

Thinking Out of the Box

Generally, entrepreneurs are ambitious and competitive. Today, the alternative is true. Student entrepreneurs are breaking down barriers and inspiring one another to figure them out together. Today's entrepreneurs don't back up when it comes to business they will go to the peak to make their business grow rapidly they will engage with their direct competitors and wish to expedite their conjoin. There's more of a community aspect. "Community is at the guts of student entrepreneurship and dealing together enables student entrepreneurs to thrive by allowing them to be told about each others' successes and mistakes.

Ideas for the Longer Term

There's more to those individuals than profiteering. But for today's youth generation, getting genius ideas into making things better, through their creativity and collaboration.

Indian Startups in 2021

More than 2,250 startups were added within the year 2021, over 600 quite what was added within the previous year. The study titled 'Indian Tech Start-up Ecosystem: Year of The Titans' also mentions that the Indian tech and tapping unexplored talent pool, startups leveraging deep-tech base continues to witness steady growth with rising investor confidence. These startups have increased twice in number over pre-covid levels also raising 24.1 billion in 2021.

In comparison to 2020, there was a 3X increase in the number of high-value deals (deals quite USD 100 million), demonstrating investor confidence with a pool of active angel investors of quite 2,400 and a readiness to require notable risks, they say. While the US remains the leading source of foreign direct investment in startups, worldwide involvement is additionally growing. About 50 percent of the deals had a minimum of 1 India-domiciled investor.

On the rear of internet commerce, freelancers, and repair industries, indirect jobs have also recovered, it said.

University education is increasingly becoming more diverse, with a greater emphasis on the full experience, not just the particular academics. Entrepreneurship education is becoming more prominent, with many students seeking out extracurricular activities and usurping additional classes to be told more about the way to reach a business. Collaboration and multi-disciplinary working are becoming more the norm, increasing the common student's exposure to entrepreneurial activities and thinking. Entrepreneurship will be quite stressful, but starting at university allows a student to achieve the mandatory life skills and confidence to form it within the "real" world, by gaining hands-on experience with an entrepreneurial person with experience or tutor and lecturers, and by collecting free resources for university members. Student entrepreneur organizations, just like the Oxford Entrepreneurs, allow students to fulfill well-suited people, in an environment of creativity and broad-mindedness.

Entrepreneurship allows students to find out quite just their chosen field of study and creates an interdisciplinary environment to figure out and develop. The networks and friendships which develop help students to become better connected once they leave university, and help prepare them for long-run success

"When starting as an undergraduate student, I never considered myself an entrepreneur; however, several mentors and entrepreneurs showed that following this life path can be rewarding not only financially, but also in terms of developing life skills such as negotiations, project management, time management, resilience, and imagination." (Stated by oxford)

University students have not had it so good when it involves entrepreneurship. Universities are increasingly understanding how entrepreneurship can add value to the student's education, and are creating more opportunities for college students to become entrepreneurs.

Founders from those three schools were also behind three of the biggest IPOs within the past year: Robinhood (Stanford), DoorDash (Stanford and UC Berkeley), and Coupang (Harvard).

Entrepreneurship prepares students for long-run academics and works achievement. If you bought a concept, the university is a perfect opportunity to pursue it.

Entrepreneurship is at an all-time high among students and graduates, many of whom are vying for the following Mark Zuckerberg success story. A recent report by The Prince's Trust and therefore the Royal Bank of Scotland Group revealed that 25% of youth are increasingly thinking of starting their own business, which supports the growing number of these doing just that – 71,000 additional people since the beginning of the recession!

Reports of Indian startups by startup India

- Indian Startup Ecosystem

India has the 3rd largest startup ecosystem within the world; expected to witness year-on-year growth of a homogenous annual growth of 12-15%.

India is now a leading nation with startups. In 2018 we were at 50,000 startups and in these startups, there were more than 15000 tech startups with 8900 - 9300 technologies based, and 1300 tech startups were born in 2019. These startups alone indicate that there are approx 2 or 3 startups born every day.

Tesla, as an example, has led the way in redefining the complete car industry. Ten years ago electric cars seemed at the best an oddity, but now they give the impression of being an excellent deal just like the way forward for cars. Without the pioneering spirit of Tesla, the car industry itself would not be possible to require this new direction. The positive impact of Tesla on the climate is probably going quite significant directly because of their being adopted and indirectly through the complete car industry's shifting to more sustainable solutions.

Startups have also shaken the very foundations of our economic systems, specifically through the now commonplace "sharing economy." Pioneers like housing-sharing Oyo and ridesharing Uber and ola, Lyft have led the thanks to a big amount of latest sharing startups enabling us to share bikes, electric scooters, and even parking spots. This features a big impact on consumption and so not only on the economy but also on the ecology of the earth.

Finally, startups have an effect also on the lives of the startup entrepreneurs themselves. By embarking on a startup journey, the entrepreneur will learn an excellent deal about discovering genuine problems, originating solutions, examining markets, and building the organization and processes to support these activities. This helps the entrepreneur develop an entrepreneurial mindset, through which they'll also contribute to other life activities, whether or not they later find themselves working in an exceedingly more traditional organization.
